Planning Guide: Autopsy.Online for High Schools

Autopsy.Online is a big platform. It's like having an anatomy lab right next door to your class every day all day. Here's a list of questions to consider.

-How would you use an anatomy lab with all the dissection tools, medical records and 50 bodies if you had access to it every day right next door to your class?

-How often would you go in?

-What kind of independent student access would you give? All day? Only certain hours?

-What kind of short-term or long-term projects would you do?

-When might you go in for a class starter?

-What kinds of "show and tell" activities would you arrange?

-What activities would you do in there as a full class?

-What activities would you do in there in small student groups? How big will you make the groups?

-What would be your cell phone, video recording, a social media policy?

-How will you take care of your students who have emotional reactions to the patients in the lab? What proactive steps would you take? Would you bring in social workers? How will you discuss the patient nudity with your students?
